BURLINGTON, Mass., June 27th, 2023 – Aspen Publishing, the leading provider of legal education content and digital learning solutions, today released its 25th episode of The Aspen Leading Edge podcast, hosted by Patty Roberts, Dean of St. Mary’s School of Law.

The Leading Edge podcast series features interviews with Aspen’s book authors and other legal thought leaders. Released each Tuesday, the podcast is available to stream on Spotify, Google Play, Apple, and Amazon Music and is accessible from Aspen’s website.

“Aspen Leading Edge is highlighting a diverse group of innovative authors and thought leaders in legal education, and exploring the disruption anticipated in its continued evolution,” says Patty Roberts. “The interviews are thought-provoking and inspire robust discussion.”

Previous episodes have included conversations with legal education leaders such as Gabriel Teninbaum, Professor of Law at Suffolk Law School who discussed topics including ChatGPT and what it could mean for the future of legal education. David Spratt and Ben Templin were also guests who talked about teaching the next generation of students. Erwin Chemerinsky, Dean of UC Berkeley School of Law, was the first official podcast guest who spoke about free speech and inclusivity in the classroom.

“What sets Aspen’s Leading Edge podcast apart is the way in which Dean Roberts guides the discussion to allow a deep exploration of issues related to the law and law school that warrant close attention,” said Lawrence Friedman, Professor of Law at Stanford University, and Aspen Leading Edge guest.

The Leading Edge podcast also gives authors a chance to discuss new books that they will be publishing with Aspen. “I really appreciate the opportunity to talk about what the casebook is doing, and where it’s going. It’s important to reach people through different media, and Aspen Leading Edge is doing just that” said Leah Litman, Professor of Law at University of Michigan.

“The Aspen Leading Edge podcast has been a terrific vehicle to spotlight so many brilliant leaders in the legal education field as they share their thoughts and ideas in a relaxed and conversational way,” says Aspen Publishing CEO, Nicole Pinard.

“We are thrilled to work with someone as talented and connected as Patty Roberts. Patty knows just what questions to ask and how best to engage guests to create a lively and entertaining conversation. At Aspen Publishing, we cherish being a trusted resource on legal education and look forward to bringing great content each week to our listeners,” says Pinard.

Aspen's Leading Edge podcast is moving ahead full steam as it continues to release weekly episodes on pertinent topics such as A.I., environmental law, and where the future of legal education will be in the next five years.
