CHAPTER ONE. INTRODUCTION

I. The Hierarchy of Decision-Making	2
A. Level One: Real or Imagined Threats to Survival	3
B. Level Two: Belief in a Just World and Illusion of Control	3
C. Level Three: Social and Cultural Beliefs and Biases	4
D. Level Four: “Heuristics”	4
E. Level Five: Fully Engaged Cognitive Reasoning	4
II. Using the Hierarchy	5

CHAPTER TWO. BELIEVING IS SEEING: INTRODUCTION TO PERCEPTION AND INFORMATION PROCESSING IN THE COURTROOM

I. Introduction	7
II. Perception in the Courtroom	8
A. Moving from Perception to Recognition	9
B. Perceiving Versus Experiencing “Facts”	10
C. Resisting Persuasion	11
D. Linking to Juror Knowledge and Beliefs to Overcome Resistance	12
III. Decision Foundations: Information Processing and Reasoning in the Courtroom	13
A. Automatic Processing	13
B. Controlled Processing	15
C. Motivated Reasoning	16

IV. Helping Jurors Process Information Appropriately 17

CHAPTER THREE. MEMORY

I. Introduction 19

 A. Short-Term and Long-Term Memory 19

 B. Information Overload (“Cognitive Busyness”). 20

 C. Methods of Encoding Memory 21

II. Schemata 22

 A. How We Create Schemata. 22

 B. Accommodation and Assimilation. 24

 C. A Disastrous Example 25

III. The Reconstructive Nature of Memory. 26

 A. Explicit and Implicit Memory. 26

 B. Schemata and Memory Contamination. 28

 C. An Example of Inaccurate Memory Reconstruction 28

 D. Interference 29

 E. The Truth About Memory. 30

IV. Ways to Improve Juror Memory 31

 A. The Serial Position Effect 31

 1. The Primacy Effect 31

 2. Primacy and Juror “Trial Stories”. 32

 3. Primacy, Cognitive Dissonance, and Sunk Costs 33

 4. The Recency Effect 35

 B. Repetition, Rehearsal, and Chunking 35

 C. “Digesting” and “Linking” the Evidence 37

 D. Using Multiple Sensory Channels. 38

 E. Creating a Memorable Trial Story 39

 1. Not Telling Too Much. 40

 2. Making Our Trial Story Memorable and “Available” 40

 3. Offering Multiple Points of Reentry 41

 F. Using Memorable Themes 41

 G. Using Fables, Parables, Allegories, and Myths 42

CHAPTER FOUR. WHY AND HOW JURORS MANIPULATE PERCEPTION AND MEMORY

I. Introduction 45

 A. Basic Instinct: Maslow’s Hierarchical Pyramid. 45

 B. The Primal Need for Self-Preservation and Protection. 46

 C. Cognitive Coping Strategies 47

 1. Belief in a “Just World” 47

 2. The Illusion of Control. 48

 D. Cognitive Dissonance. 48

II. Searching for Explanations in the Courtroom 49

 A. How Jurors Manipulate Their Perceptions in Criminal Cases . . . 50

 B. How Jurors Manipulate Their Perceptions in Civil Cases 51

 C. How Plaintiff’s Counsel Can Respond 52

 D. An Example 53

 E. Letting Jurors Do Their Job. 55

CHAPTER FIVE. COMMON JUROR BIASES

I. Introduction to Biases 57

 A. Linking and Neural Networking 58

 B. Biased Assimilation and Belief Perseverance. 58

 C. Contamination of Trial Stories 59

 D. Linking to Juror Belief Biases 60

II. Cognitive Biases That Affect Juror “Trial Story” Construction 61

 A. The Confirmation Bias 61

 B. The Hindsight Bias 63

 1. Hindsight and Counterfactual Thinking. 64

 2. Blaming the Last Actor 66

 C. The Self-Serving Bias 67

 D. The False Consensus Effect. 68

 E. The Consequences of Leaving Gaps in Our Proof 69

III. Overcoming Juror Biases for the Plaintiff 70

IV. Knowing When Juror Biases Cannot Be Overcome 73

CHAPTER SIX. SOCIAL BIASES: ATTRIBUTION THEORY

I. Introduction 75

II. Attributional Biases 76

 A. The Actor-Observer Bias 77

 B. The Fundamental Attribution Error 79

 C. Social Roles. 80

 1. The Attractiveness Bias 81

 2. An Illusory Perception of Competence 81

III. Attributional Errors at Trial. 82

 A. Defensive Attribution 82

 B. The Illusion of Professional Competence. 84

IV. Overcoming Attributional Biases. 84

 A. Focusing on the Defendant 85

 B. Avoiding Negativity. 86

 C. Using Options to Infer Intent 87

 D. Using Rules to Show Wrongdoing 87

 E. Living in a Just World? 88

CHAPTER SEVEN. CULTURAL NORMS AND BIASES

I. Introduction 89

II. Individualistic and Collectivist Cultures. 90

III. Normative Bias 91

 A. Examples of Conforming Conduct to the “Norm” 91

 B. The Normative Bias at Trial. 91

 1. The Need for Certainty Norm 93

 2. The Need for Intent Norm 94

 3. The Status Quo Norm 97

 4. The “Politically Correct” Norm. 97

 5. The Aversion to Loss Norm. 98

IV. “Imprinting” and “Culture Codes” 99

 A. The Culture Code. 101

 B. Culture Codes in the Marketplace. 102

C. American Culture Codes at Trial	103
1. Personal Responsibility	104
2. Suspicion of Lawyers and the Civil Justice System.	106
3. Stereotyping and the Ultimate Attribution Error.	107
4. Overcoming Cultural Biases	108

CHAPTER EIGHT. HEURISTICS AND OTHER INFORMATION-PROCESSING STRATEGIES

I. Introduction to Reasoning and Heuristics	111
A. How We Create Heuristics	113
B. Why Jurors Rely on Heuristics	114
II. Three Primary Heuristics	114
A. The Representativeness Heuristic	115
1. Perception of Randomness	115
2. Examples of the Representativeness Heuristic	116
3. Representativeness at Trial.	117
B. The Availability Heuristic	119
1. Frequency of Exposure	121
2. Availability and Counterfactual Thinking	122
3. Availability and Experts.	123
4. Accessibility and Priming	124
C. The Anchoring Heuristic	125
1. “Anchoring” at Trial	126
2. Anchoring and the Status Quo	128
3. Belief Biases as Anchors.	129
III. Vividness and Saliency	130
A. Vividness.	130
B. Saliency.	131

CHAPTER NINE. IMPLEMENTING WHAT WE’VE LEARNED

I. Opening Statement for the Plaintiff in a Dram Shop Case	133
II. Closing Argument for the Plaintiff in a Breast Cancer Case	147
III. Conclusion	156
